

Abstract

5 A rack, in particular for cable television, having a number of modules whose inputs and outputs are connected by means of cables for the transmission of radio frequency signals and control signals, is described. The modules (2) are connected via the common inputs and outputs by means of coaxial cables (3) which carry radio frequency signals as well as coded control signals.